

What Our Cast Loves About America

Janelle Cox - From her stunning natural landscapes and wide array of geographic regions, to the amazing cultural melting pot of people, food, language, art, and music, America's richness truly lies in these reflections of the most beautiful parts of humanity. I feel truly privileged that, no matter what else may be going on around me, I still have the freedom to take refuge in the splendor of her land and immerse myself in the beauty of her diversity.

Ian Miller - I love what our country stands for, which is hope and freedom. There is a reason people move to this country to start their life: The opportunity it provides.

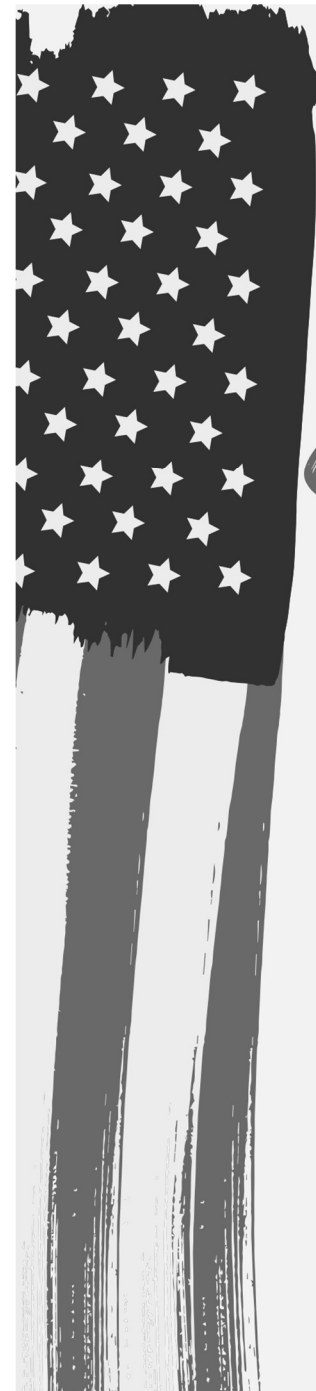

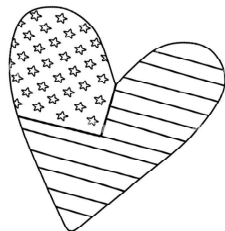

Joanne Peterson - I love the mountains out my window, I love the ocean and the beaches, and I love how big this country is.

Brett Short - I believe in the America that I was born and raised in – a land of different people who can come together, despite differences, to create a country that offers freedom and the opportunity of prosperity for all. I still believe in that America.

John Hall – I like how driven and tenacious Americans tend to be. We're always working on something, planning something.

Nicole Bostick - I've always had a sense of American pride, probably due to being raised in a military family. One of my favorite things about our country, if I have to pick, would be opportunity.

Scott Black - The greatest thing about our country is how we all come together to help our neighbors in times of need, whether it's a major disaster or a neighborhood crisis. I'm proud to be part of a country where people are willing to lend a hand and help when we can.

Director’s Note:

One of the best parts of community theater is the community – the group of people who come together to share their talents in order to make art. This play would never have happened without a strong, committed group of people who have worked tirelessly so that I could bring my vision to life on the FSLT stage. I am, as always, grateful for each and every one of them. Each member of this cast and crew brought their unique gifts and poured them into the pot. We stirred it all together and created a hilarious show I hope you all enjoy. In a way, we’ve mimicked this country – this amazing melting pot – I love. Let us all take a moment with this show to celebrate our country, art, theater, and most importantly, the diversity it takes to make them all wonderful.– Tina Dale
